

Kristina Skutlaberg

Children's Book author and illustrator

About me

I'm a children's book illustrator and surface designer with a passion for bold color, nostalgic charm, and storytelling that sparks joy.

Rooted in a Scandinavian appreciation for simplicity, nature, and everyday magic, my illustrations aim to uplift, inspire, and connect with young readers through warmth, whimsy, and character-driven worlds.

I work both digitally and traditionally, often blending handmade textures with playful composition. My style is ideal for emotionally rich stories, imaginative adventures, and books that radiate heart and optimism.

I'm currently seeking new publishing opportunities and would love to collaborate on projects that celebrate creativity, wonder, and joyful storytelling.

The attic ate my sock

missing sock investigator extraordinaire

There's a sock thief on the loose—and Ellie's not stopping until she finds out who's sneaking around the attic...

Character concept illustration developed for a picture book idea in progress.

The great veggie prank

Broccoli and Onion had a plan. It involved flour, perfect timing, and absolutely no adult supervision.

Character concept illustration developed for a humorous picture book idea in progress.

Jessie! Amelie!

A graphic novel page and matching card game concept, featuring a family in mild morning chaos. Developed for the MATS Bootcamp Special Character Play course.

Hello sunshine

A board book page and coordinating finger puppet set concept, featuring a flower and her friends. Developed for the MATS Bootcamp Special Character Play course.

Erin – Expressions & Action

Whether she's building courage, following tracks, or facing her fears, Erin's always got her red coat and a whole lot of heart.

Character development done for MATS Illustrating Childrens Books course.

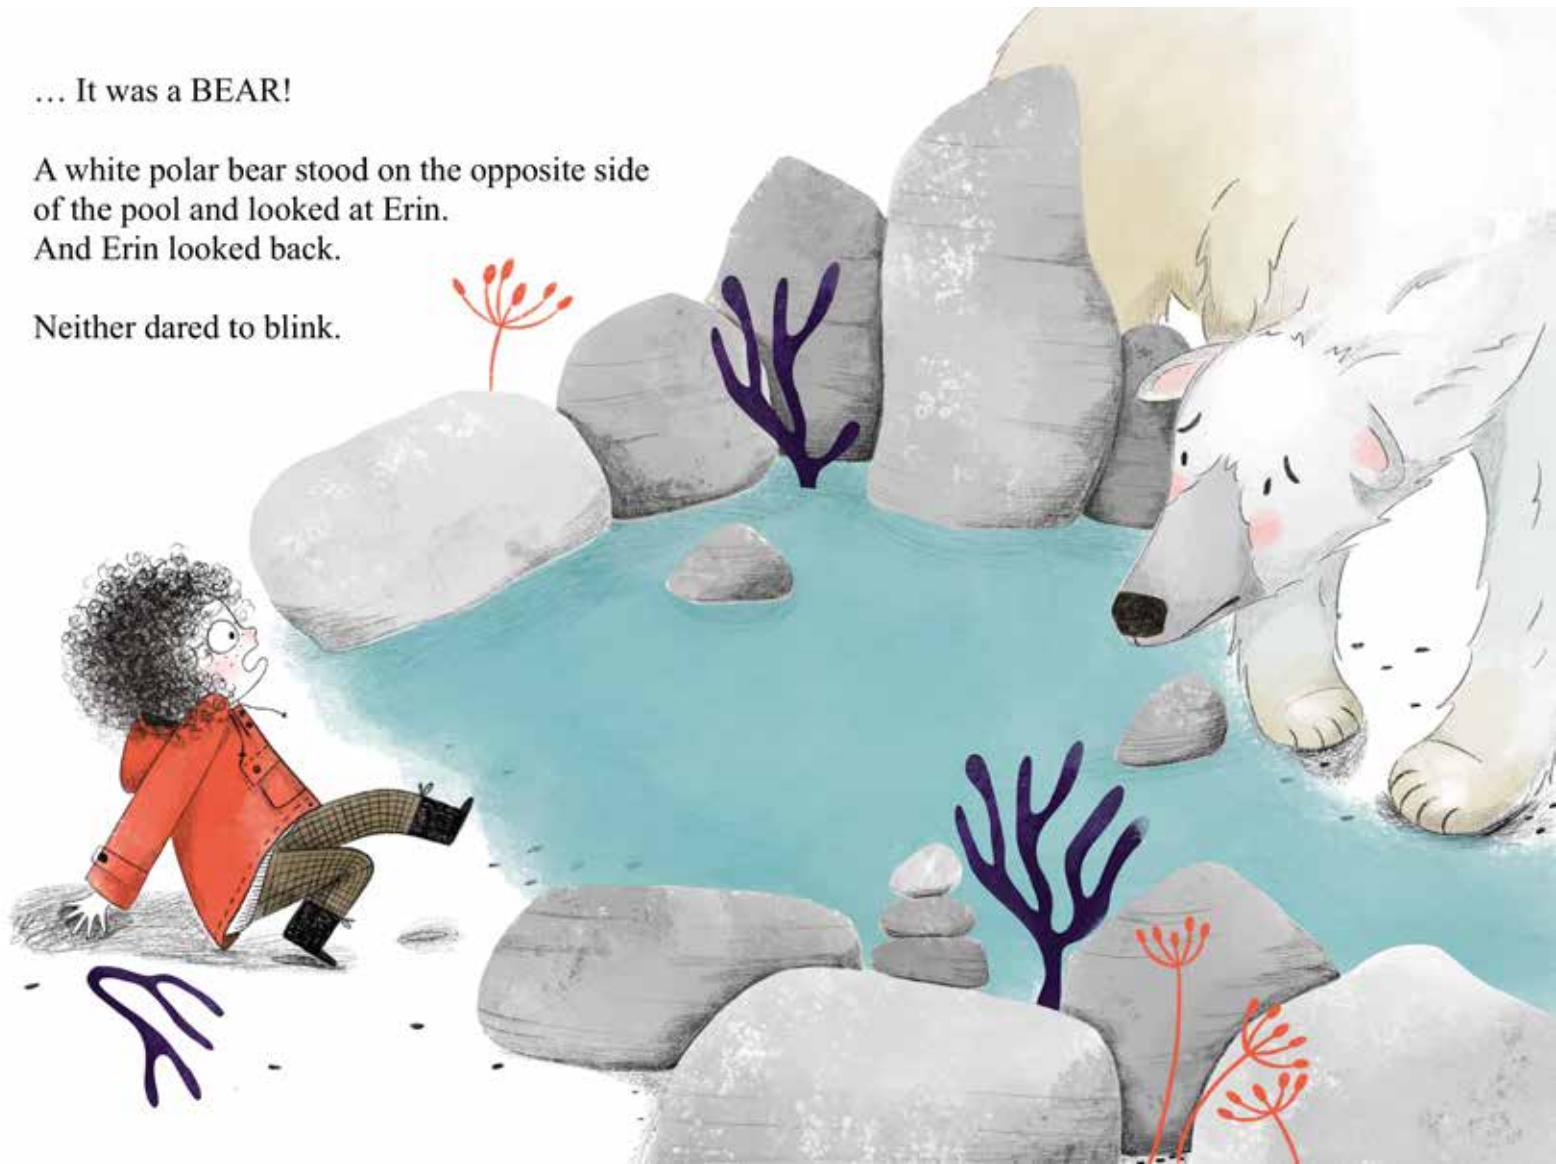

Erin and the Midsummer Bear

... It was a BEAR!

A white polar bear stood on the opposite side of the pool and looked at Erin.
And Erin looked back.

Neither dared to blink.

Lenny the lemur

A double-page picture book spread developed for the MATS Bootcamp Special Character Play course.

Mia and Hen

"Are we there yet?" said Hen to Mia.
Mia didn't answer, she just kept walking.

"Faster! Faster!" Hen shouted.

Character concept illustration developed for a picture book idea in progress.

Contact

Thank you for spending time with my work.

I'm always open to new collaborations, commissions, and storytelling opportunities.

If my style feels like a good fit, I'd love to connect.

